

Hamina Energy chose HiQ's Friends as its new integration platform

Hamina Energy chose HiQ's integration platform Friends to bring efficiency to its operations. Friends is a modern hybrid integration platform that can handle integration needs from file transfers to hyperautomation and API management. With the Friends platform, Hamina Energy can better meet business requirements and become more agile, flexible and cost-effective than before.

"I'm really glad to welcome Hamina Energy as client and that we continue to expand even more in the energy sector", says Lars Stugemo, CEO and President at HiQ.

Hamina Energy uses many business-critical internal and external information systems that already have multiple integrations between them. Managing the whole digital operating environment requires a reliable, fast and easy-to-manage integration platform. And the goal set by the company was to find a modern integration platform that would be easy to use and achieve clear cost savings.

"We received good feedback on the system through our networks and ended up choosing Friends as our new integration platform. Deployment was light and smooth and we quickly got started with the system. In addition, the required infrastructure is lighter than our previous solution, so we are very satisfied with our choice", says Jari Leskinen, ICT-Manager at Hamina Energy.

Hamina Energy has implemented several integrations by using Friends solution. As a low-code platform, Friends enables development without third parties, thus expediting it and also saving costs.

"We have several business-critical information systems with multiple integrations between them. A reliable and easy-to-manage integration system is vital for us in a digitalized operation environment", says Leskinen.
